Description

With this 1/84 scale replica, you can represent correctly the appearance and artillery of the Santisima Trinidad in the battle of Trafalgar since it brings the howitzers that the ship carried in great detail :144 cannons. Likewise, modelers who wish to finish the hull of the magnificent model of the Spanish ship are in luck because the kit includes copper tape to be able to do it below the waterline.

Once it is assembled, the model of Santisima Trinidad (22901), measures 48.85" (1191 mm) length, 35.83" (904 mm) height and 18.26" (464 mm) width; its design using a false keel and frames brings its assembly closer to the real ship. Achieve the best finishes for your 1/84 scale model by painting it with the Set of Paints Santisima Trinidad (277PACK00), for sale separately.

As a bonus, the modeling kit of the Spanish ship of the line Santisima Trinidad comes with 5 die-cast figures. Of course, if you wish, provide more realism to the faithful miniature replica by adding the Set of 16 Metal Figures and Accessories for Model Ships of the Spanish Navy (226917), also for sale separately.

Remember that, as the ship is ready to light up, the model can come even more alive with the installation of our LED Lighting Set for Models and DIY Projects (27550), available separately. You can also accompany the ship of the line with the wooden model of its Captain's Boat (19014) at 1/50 scale, sold separately.

HISTORY: THE SPANISH VESSEL SANTISIMA TRINIDAD

Santisima Trinidad (officially, Nuestra Señora de la Santisima Trinidad) was a Spanish vessel with 120 guns at first, extended to 144 later. It was the largest ship of its time, so it received the nicknames of El Escorial de los Mares and was one of the few line ships of four bridges that existed.

Despite this, it was not very effective because of its clumsiness and slow navigation. It is remembered most of all for its tragic end at the Battle of Trafalgar (October 21st, 1805).

It was under the orders of the squad leader Balthasar Hidalgo de Caceres, and Francisco Javier de Urzua y Borja as flag captain.

After a hard fight was captured by the English in very bad conditions, with more than 200 dead and 100 injured. The English made every effort to save it and take it to the English port of Gibraltar, being towed by the frigates HMS Naiad and HMS Phoenix. However, it would finally sink October 24th, some 25 or 28 miles south of Cadiz.

Symbol of the end of Spanish power in the seas, the greatest war weapon of its time now remains at the bottom of the sea. Its artillery were extracted and installed at the entrance of the Pantheon of Maritime Illustres located at the School of Suboficiales of the Navy, in San Fernando (Cadiz).
